

WOMEN'S LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE

DEVELOPING, ENHANCING and ENABLING

SUCCESSFUL WOMEN'S LEADERSHIP within THE PUBLIC and PRIVATE SECTOR

30 April 2014 Pullman Putrajaya Lakeside

Are women really such poor leaders?

I am a new woman and I know it. I mean, an awakened woman, awakened to a sense of capacity and responsibility, not merely to the family and the household, but to the state.

Catherine Spence 1899

DEVELOPING, ENHANCING AND ENABLING SUCCESSFUL WOMEN'S LEADERSHIP WITHIN THE PUBLIC

& PRIVATE SECTOR

INTRODUCTION

Many women leaders today are torn between the often conflicting demands of career, personal life and wellbeing. The pressure can be intense, and the "price of promotion" too high to pay. Recognising the power of womenomics, the Malaysian Government is aggressively taking steps to leverage on women. Ambitiously, the 10th Malaysia Plan aims to increase women's labour force participation to 55 percent in 2015, within the broader framework of labour market reform. Women are similarly integrated in to the Economic Transformation Programme (ETP): as part of the Strategic Reform Initiative on Human Capital Development, a Roadmap for Leveraging Women's Talent was developed outlining measures targeted at all stages of a woman's career.

"Malaysia has the opportunity to accelerate its transformation into a high-income economy if more women were in the labour force" said Annette Dixon, World Bank Country Director for Malaysia. "Closing gender gaps and encouraging women to bring their skills to the labour market could leapfrog Malaysia to high income status." Source: Talentcorp Malaysia.
